1. In a raid by United Nations bombers in April 1951, about 400 laborers working on the Anak (125-30, 38-30) (YC 1864) airfield were killed. Because of continuous air attacks since that time, all work on the airfield was stopped in July.
2. The North Korean Ministry of Internal Affairs in mid-1951 established mobile police units for the purpose of hunting down and destroying United Nations paratroopers. Each unit includes 20 to 60 men, who are armed with one or two Soviet light machine guns, U. S. M-1's, and carbines. Two-thirds of their clothing is United States army clothing.
3. On 19 July 1951 a Soviet artillery unit with 87 artillery pieces pulled by trucks left Sinuiju for Chongju (125-13, 39-42) (XD 9096).
4. A North Korean army unit, strength approximately 2,500 men, moved from Sinuiju in the direction of Anju (125-40, 39-37) (YD 2988) in four trains on 24 July. Residents of Sinuiju heard their eventual destination was the thirty-eighth parallel area.
5. In early August Soviet and Chinese Communist troops were billeted in civilian homes in the Pakch'on (125-35, 39-44) (YE 2101) area, waiting for repair of the bridges across the Ch'ongch'on River south of that city. Both the steel and wooden bridges were washed away by floods. Residents of the area believed that three months of work would be required to repair both bridges.
6. A North Korean army unit and local self-defense units were guarding the coast line in Anju-gun (125-29, 39-32) (YD 1376), where mines were laid along an embankment on the coast in the rice-paddy area at Samchon-ri.
